

February News

A Gentle Winter Draws Hikers

The lack of severe storms and relatively mild temperatures has helped us keep our preserves open and clear of hazards this winter. Hiking in the winter can offer enhanced views, fewer pests and a chance to get a good dose of sunshine and fresh air.

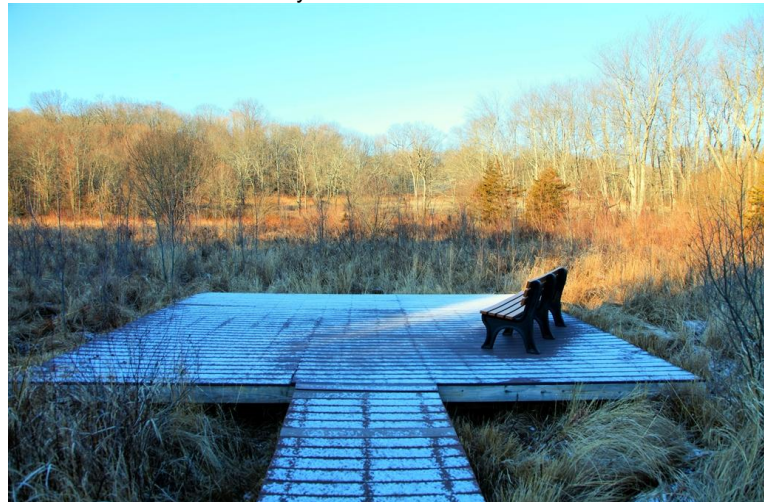

A few options to consider:

The Koons Preserve is home to Spruce Brook, a part of the Pomperaug Watershed. The brook drops 170 feet as it flows through the property. Views of the brook and rocky ravine are best this time of year.

Phillips Farm Preserve is a wonderful place to hike through rolling fields and forest. Phillips connects to the Lovdal Farm Preserve which offers ridgeline views and gentle slopes.

The Bassett Preserve also has extensive trails that connect to the Ivers Preserve. A key feature is the large pond with remnants of a commercial laundry. This winter, beavers have made this pond their home.

New Board Members

Meet Ed Platt and Mike Mattera

The Southbury Land Trust is pleased to welcome Ed Platt and Mike Mattera to the Board of Trustees.

Ed Platt is an active farmer in Southbury. He, along with his wife Jeannine and son Benjamin, are the owners and operators of Platt Farm, a family business since 1773. Ed has been active in the Southbury community for many years and also in the farming community throughout Connecticut. He currently serves as the chairman of the USDA Farm Service Agency for the county office, he is a member of the CT Farm Bureau and is active in numerous co-ops and agricultural organizations. He was also the former chair of the Southbury Rural Preservation Commission.

Mike Mattera has been a Southbury resident for over 26 years raising his three children in Region 15 schools. He was a Boy Scout leader for Troop 162 during his son Chris' time in scouting and became involved and familiar with the Southbury Land Trust while working on numerous Eagle Scout projects. A lover of nature and outdoor pursuits, Mike has been a frequent volunteer with the Land Trust in recent years, helping clear trails and participating in stewardship activities.
